Explanation of the Process – How Does It Work? 1-Judicial auction: When a property is auctioned by court and receives no bids, the creditor (usually a bank) may request adjudication of the property. 2-Assignment of auction rights: Before the adjudication is finalized and registered under the creditor's name, they can transfer the rights to a third party. This is formalized through an appearance before the Court Clerk, with the assignee present to accept and make the required payment. 3-Payment and documentation: The assignee must pay the agreed price and submit the necessary documentation to complete the transfer. Afterwards, the court issues an adjudication decree in favor of the assignee, who can then register the property at the Land Registry.
